Total repaid = principal + interest + bank charge + penalties. Interest and late penalties are collected when a loan is repaid in full, so they count in the profit of the year the loan was repaid in full, shared at the following July AGM. Interest is charged once, when a loan is issued, and after the due date a late penalty is added to the balance for each full month until the loan is paid in full, penalties included, or is marked defaulted. Both are part of the loan's outstanding balance, not an amount owed on top of it. Repayments only reduce the balance; they are not split between the amount lent, interest and penalties. A loan's interest and penalties are therefore collected together, on the date the loan is repaid in full; until then they are still to collect, within the balance.
